

Adrienne LaCava has aspired to writing novels since her days with Nancy Drew. She grew up in central Texas during the sixties and made journalism a business minor at UNT, going on to pen corporate PR and training pieces in healthcare and banking careers. The yen to craft story never left, however, and ten years ago she began to study fiction at night through SMU, knowing someday she'd tackle her dream.

Dallas Texas is home, shared with a husband who keeps her laughing, and two highly amusing rescued mutts. At the center of life are regular visits from the children, especially her grandson, and while she's always writing or reading, she'll jet away on adventure at the drop of a hat.
